

Washington NAVMAG Indian Island

Facility and Location

A new command officially joined the four major Navy installations of Navy Region Northwest on April 27, 2000. The Former Naval Weapons Station Seal Beach Detachment Port Hadlock officially became Naval Magazine (NAVMAG) Indian Island. The 2,716 acre facility now reports directly to the region commander. The mission of providing ordnance related support including receipt, storage, issuance, and inspection did not change. Effective October 1, 1999, NAVMAG Indian Island moved from the southwest region (Seal Beach) to the northwest region (Naval Submarine Base Bangor).

Media Sampled and Findings

Drinking Water — In 2007, four of four samples detected perchlorate from 0.06 to 0.1 ppb.

Appropriate Actions

Not Applicable. All samples were below the EPA and DoD Preliminary Remediation Goal of 15 ppb.